Richard Carmona
17th Surgeon General of the United States

In 2002, Dr. Richard Carmona was nominated by the President and unanimously confirmed by the United States Senate to become the 17th Surgeon General of the United States. Dr. Carmona was selected because of his extensive experience in public health, clinical sciences, healthcare management, preparedness and his commitment to prevention as an effective means to improve public health and reduce healthcare costs, while improving the quality and quantity of life.

Dr. Carmona’s path to becoming Surgeon General was characterized by numerous challenges throughout his life. Born to a poor Hispanic family in New York City, Dr. Carmona experienced homelessness, hunger and health disparities during his youth. These experiences greatly sensitized him to the relationships among culture, health, education, economic status and shaped his future.

After dropping out of high school, Dr. Carmona enlisted in the US Army. While serving, he earned his general equivalency diploma and went on to become a combat-decorated Special Forces Vietnam veteran. After leaving active duty, he attended Bronx Community College of the City University of New York through an open enrollment program for Vietnam veterans. He then attended the City University of New York and went on to the University of California-San Francisco, where he received a BS and MD. At the University of California Medical School, Dr. Carmona was awarded the prestigious gold-headed cane as the top graduate.

Trained in general and vascular surgery, Dr. Carmona also completed a National Institutes of Health-sponsored fellowship in trauma, burns, and critical care. He was then recruited jointly by the Tucson (Arizona) Medical Center and the University of Arizona to start and direct Arizona’s first regional trauma care system. He went on to become the chairman of the State of Arizona Southern Regional Emergency Medical System; a professor of surgery, public health, and family and community medicine at the University of Arizona; and the Pima County Sheriff’s Department surgeon and deputy sheriff. He is also a fellow of the American College of Surgeons.

Dr. Carmona went back to graduate school in order to complete a master’s degree in public health policy and administration. His interest in public health stemmed from the realization that most of his patients’ illnesses and injuries were completely preventable.
Dr. Carmona has also served for over 25 years with the Pima County Sheriff’s Department in Tucson as detective and SWAT team leader. He is one of the most highly decorated police officers in Arizona and his numerous awards include the National Top Cop Award, the National SWAT Officer of the Year Award, and the National Tactical EMS Award. He is a nationally recognized SWAT expert and has published extensively on SWAT training and tactics, forensics and tactical emergency medical support. Dr. Carmona has also served as a medical director of police and fire departments and is a fully qualified peace officer with expertise in special operations and emergency preparedness, including weapons of mass destruction.

As Surgeon General, Dr. Carmona focused on prevention, preparedness, health disparities, health literacy and global health. He also issued many landmark Surgeon General communications during his tenure, including the definitive Surgeon General’s Report about the dangers of second-hand smoke.

A strong supporter of community service, he has served on numerous community and national boards and provided leadership to many diverse private and government organizations.

In 2006, Dr. Carmona successfully completed the statutory four-year term of the US Surgeon General and was named to the position of vice chairman for Canyon Ranch, the country’s leading health and wellness company for over 35 years. He also serves as chief executive officer of the company’s health division and oversees health strategy and policy for all Canyon Ranch businesses. He is president of the nonprofit Canyon Ranch Institute and the first distinguished professor of public health at the University of Arizona’s Mel and Enid Zuckerman College of Public Health. He also serves as a director of several corporate boards and is actively engaged in developing emerging science and technology to translate to the market for public good and economic benefit.

Topics:
- From Dropout to Surgeon General
- The Business Case for Diversity
- A Vision of the Future of Technology & Medicine
- Patient Quality & Safety
- PTSD & Mental Illness
- The Affordable Care Act
- Immigration & Border Issues
- National Preparedness & National Security
- Military & Veterans Issues
- Brain Health, Cognitive Preservation & Vitality